Dear Mom and Dad,

I got down here late yesterday afternoon and have checked into my room successfully. I know your surprised I've navigated this far without a major mishap, but it looks as though I've been well trained. My room is East Towers 215. I can't describe how great looking the campus is, after only one visit I had forgotten how much of Mother Nature is still evident. The trees show no signs of autumn, and although the weather is a little warm, it is very comfortable, since I do have air conditioning in my dorm. The campus isn't too big, of course, but it's laid out well so that at any time you can be fairly close to open spaces - for example there's a huge grove, and another smaller area like it, and a lot of woods and all so you can get away from all the nice brick buildings when you feel like you want to. I will be glad when fall does arrive, I'll bet it looks even better.

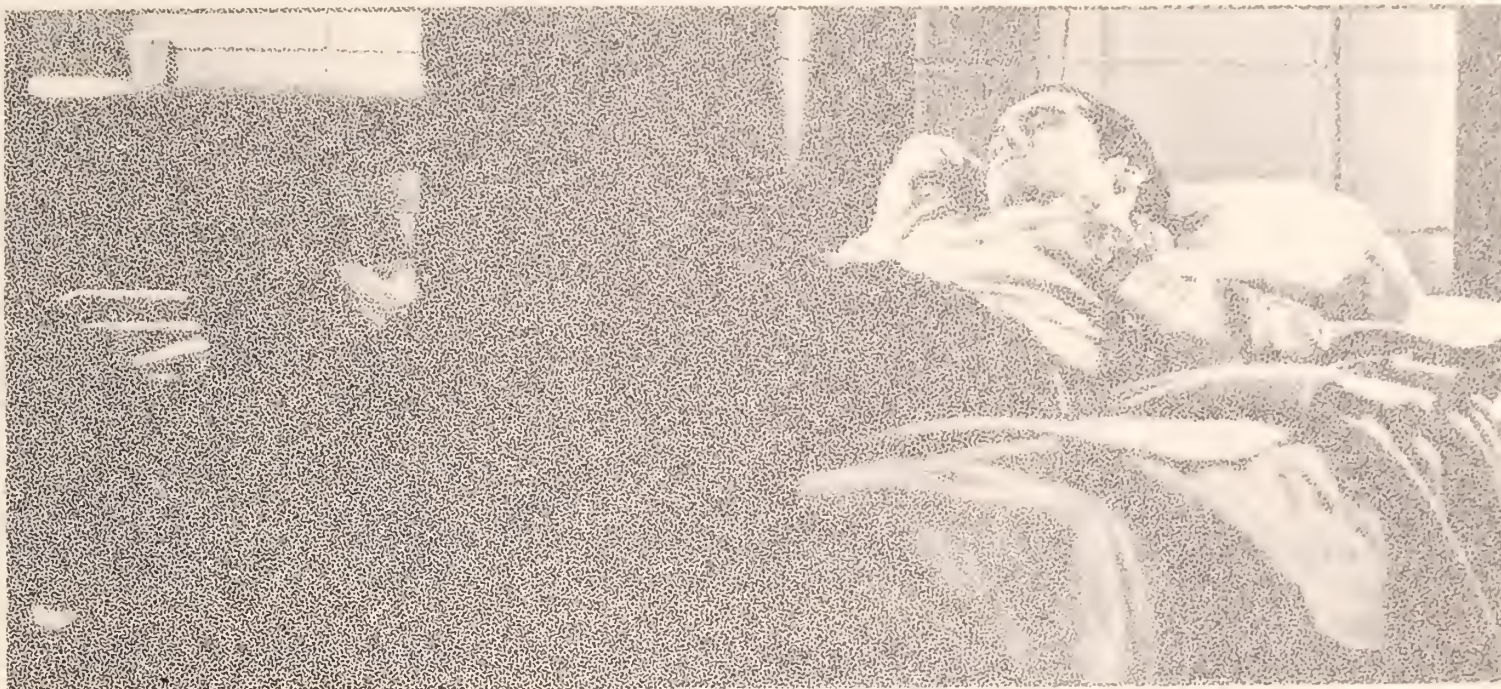

My roommate (or is it 'roommate'?) seems to be a pretty nice guy. His name is Tad Lawrence and he's from Meadville, Mississippi which is somewhere. He's a little bit different, but then I guess everybody is to some extent. He's friendly at least. I got here before he did and had all my things moved in when he arrived. The first thing he did was to sit down and get a bottle of bourbon out of his suitcase and hide it and about three more under his bed. Never fear, Mother, I wouldn't touch a drop of the stuff (Heaven forbid, it's against the rules!). He seemed very pleased with himself - he feels like he's getting away with something, this is his form of protest, I suppose. I can see some late night trips to the john with him around. Just call me Florence. He says 100% of the students up here drink, if not more (Pretty witty, isn't he?) It's not that they drink that much, but they anticipate it so eagerly that that it doesn't take much to get them drunk since they're already half-high before they start just on the spirit of the thing. The guy, his girl, the game and the bottle - whoopeeee! My roommate has already told me three times to get started getting a date for the game three weeks from now. Apparently all but the real dogs have already been asked to the first two. There is certainly a large proportion of good looking, large proportioned girls up here.

Last night Bill Rogers and I went out to a place called Kiame's - a real palace. The food was tasty to say the least, but somewhat ~~overpriced~~. After that we went to the show which wasn't very good either, but it was better than playing the pin ball machines, bowling, or roller skating. Oxford may turn out to be a tad dull, if you know what I mean. But then I'm not here to have a good time, am I? Well, rush starts tomorrow early, so I better quit. I'll write again soon. My P.O. box is 7603 and I'm right next to a good looking girl (or 'chick' as they're called here) so I'll be checking on your $$$$$$ reply frequently.

Love,
Fred

P.S. How 'bout a t.v.?

(September 17)... I'm glad rush is finally over. At first I enjoyed meeting all of the people, but as the week wore on I began to fade. My hand hurt from all of the handshakes, the names ran by me unheard, and I got tired of all the sincere interest from all the 'frat cats'. The water turned into punch by the second party, and by the third I was being walked around with someone's hand on my back, a coke in one hand, and with smooth words flowing into my weary ear. I was told ten times that this was the most important decision of my life. All of the people here are really 'sharp' dressers. I think that the boys are more fashion conscious than the girls. The 'in' thing now is to be fashionably hippie. Hair should be over ears and collar but not too long; wire-rims are a must; moustaches are good but beards are a little too much; sandals or hushpuppies do for shoes. In order to be with it you have to have a bike and knapsack on your back. I'm not sure, but some say that some carry an unwarranted weed in the knapsacks. Nasty knapsacks. Concerning the 'weed', it seems that even some of our fine, genteel Southern belles are smoking the stuff. And all in the privacy of their ante-bellum sorority houses. I'm sure they are reveling in their new-found freedom.

(Oct.23)... Classes have been going well, at least I think they have. I have done pretty well on all of my tests so far. The best thing about Ole Miss that I've seen so far is that you can get to know your professors, you're more than just a seat assignment. Most of the teachers here are good, although I do have a couple of boring ones. I guess there will always be bad apples. Case in point (about getting to be friends): the other night, Friday, three other guys and I went over to my philosophy professors house and had dinner with him and his wife. The other three have had him in a couple of courses and naturally knew him better than I did, but I do have him for Introduction to Philosophy. I imagine that I learned more over at his house that night than I've learned so far all semester. There is really an advantage as far as learning is concerned in being friends with your teacher.

(Nov. 15).... I've come to know how much I don't know, which is, after all, a good thing to know, which at first glance might look witty or original, but comes very close to being camp. At any rate, I have, until now, considered myself at least normally intelligent, in regard to the fact that I rate intelligence largely by literacy, "What have you read?" "Who is the older brother of the Brothers Karamazov?" What I am trying to say is that I have always felt myself to be above average as far as my range of reading is concerned, and though I still think I am above average I also consider myself ~~so~~ greatly lacking, almost approaching illiteracy. I don't know a damn lot more than I do know. I am ~~a~~ sure that this will always be the case - at least it's true of everyone I've met here so far, or anywhere for ~~that~~ that matter. But perhaps I can put a dent in that vast unknown.

By the way - "knocked out" and "too much, man" are 'in' right now. But in two weeks the sharp people will stop using them because they are being used too ~~often~~ often. Simultaneously they will look down their noses at anyone who does use these phrases (such use immediately labels ~~one~~ the unfortunates as being unsharp) and also smoothly pick up a couple more. Two weeks ago it was 'together' and 'really nice'. There will be a splinter group, by the way, who will righteously keep using the 'perfectly good words' to show that they are above fads and trends, but still the whole thing is controlled by ego. It's a big ego trip (that's in now, too), all of it. Sincere detachment is the way out.....or is that 'far out'? at any rate I think I'm going to do my term paper in English 102 on "The Significance of Speech Patterns at Ole Miss as Reflected in Dormitory and Fraternity B.S." It'll have charts and cycles and it'll be neat. Right Arm, Farm Out, etcetera (with a hard 'c')

(Jan.12)...I'm sorry I haven't written sooner, but I've been studying hard. Christmas was great and thanks for the money. You won't believe it, but I still have some left. I may not even be overdrawn this month.

My studying is coming along pretty well, but I'm scared of my finals next week. I'll be glad when they're over; that seems ages and ages from now. Everyone(almost everyone) stays up all night before their exams cramming after taking a dex (a stimulant) to keep them awake. Don't worry though, I've got something better to keep me awake...fear!!

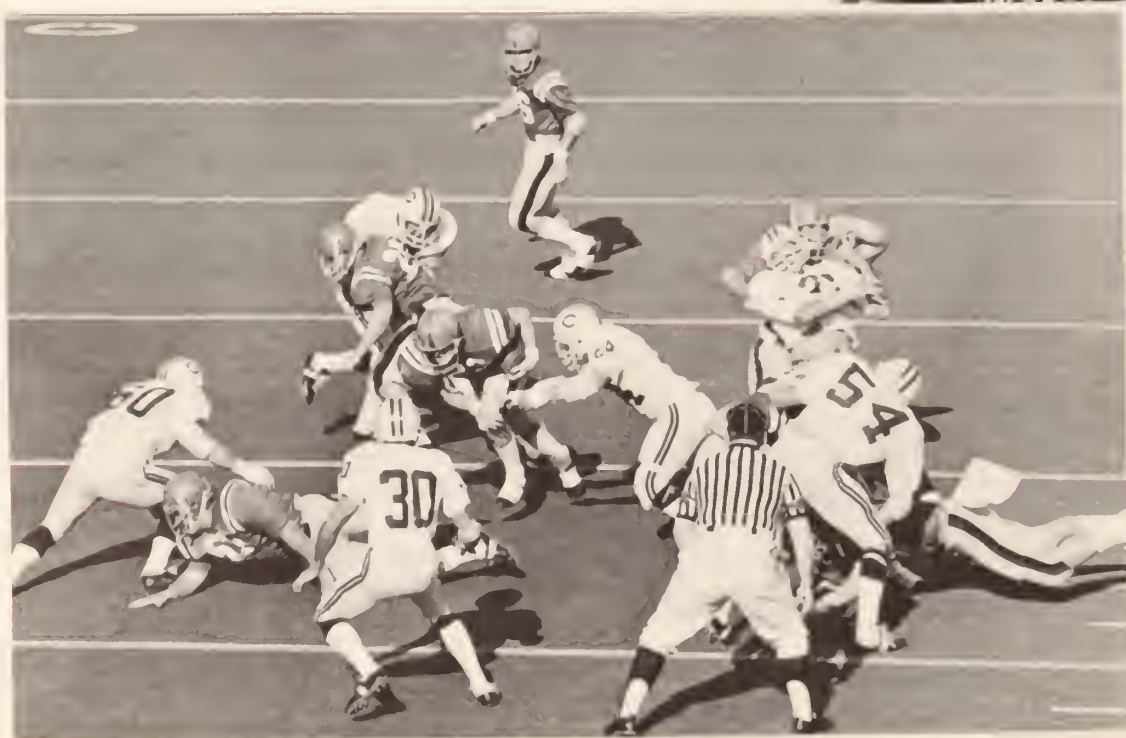

(February 23)...Dad, do you remember the weightlifting course I signed up for. Well I'm still in it and I seem to be making progress in spite of the facilities. (With a physique like mine there is infinite room for improvement, and I feel I am in no immediate danger of becoming muscle-bound.) About the facilities for the non-varsity sports-it appears to my untrained freshman eye that they have been somewhat neglected. For example, there are some top-notch "iron men" (weightlifting jargon) here who would like to compete on an inter varsity level but cannot get the funds. Ditto for our small but tough band of soccer fanatics. I'm sure there are numerous other minor sports that have been pushed aside when they asked for money. In short, there just doesn't seem to be enough diversification in the allocation of money for minor and non-varsity sports.

Along these lines, the UMMA has really been under fire. Hopefully, the flack will put them on their toes and make them more conscious of student needs (like the diversification). One thing is for sure though- they've got a new head coach for the football team and he did a fantastic job. His name is Billy Kinerd end...

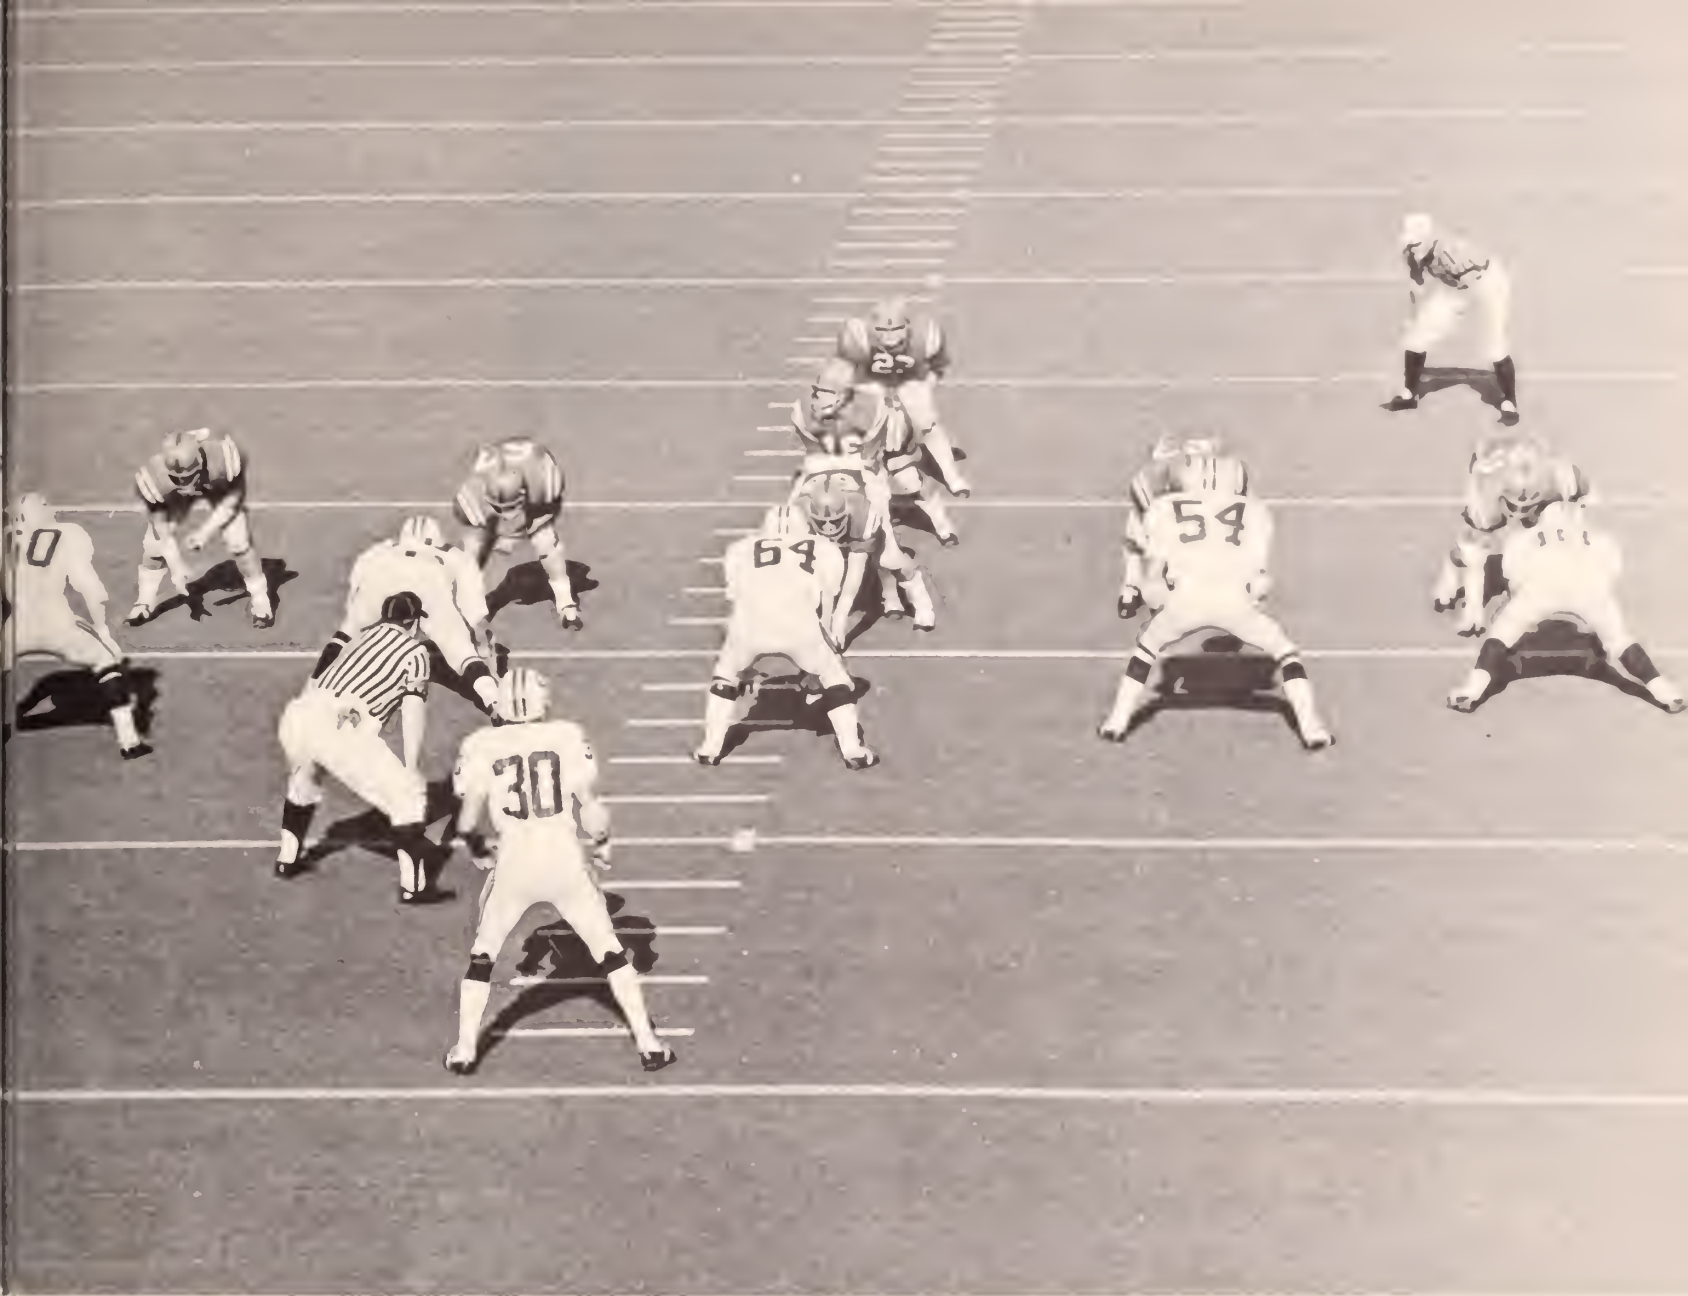

(March 3)...Second semester is drifting along pretty well, I suppose. The weather continues to get warmer, although there are frequent setbacks. T-shirts and blue jeans are irresistibly coming out of hibernation.

Something has come up which is superficially simple but which has lifelong implications, and I would respect your opinion on the matter. As you know, my grades first semester were pretty good, not real good, but pretty good. And I know you want me to make the Honor roll forever and ever (Amen) and so do I.

Lately though I have been nominated to several committees in the fraternity and in the ASB (student body gov't). The term for me is that I'm being 'groomed' for future possibilities. You see, people here are in large part for three reasons: 1) what first they're in 2) the number of committees they've been on 3) what kind of person they are.

They are elected for those reasons and in that order. My first and third qualifications have already been settled, for better or worse, and now it's up to me and my influential brothers to work on the other area - therefore the ~~many~~ numerous nominations and positions.

I am hesitant for two reasons to comply with the 'grooming' - 1) my grades must inevitably suffer 2) the ASB is not really worth the trouble. For the most part it's insignificant, although some steps in the right direction have been made this year. On the other hand, I think it might be a good reason to get involved for two reasons - 1) it would look good on my record 2) maybe I could do something worthwhile in the ASB.

What I am saying is this - Do you want me to go full speed ahead in the ASB, or would you prefer that I concentrate only on my grades? You might say that my grades wouldn't necessarily go down, and I agree. But what's important is the knowledge I get; the grades are secondary, or should be. Time in student government would take away time in study. What should I do? I can either be a V.I.P. or a nobody with good grades. It's not that simple.

(Apr.9)... There's a strange situation which exists up here, or at least it seems strange to me. You rarely see blacks and whites walking and talking together, except inside class. Other than that we go our separate ways for the most part, and little is done by either side to promote friendship and ALL of that. There are exceptions, but they are few and far between. The term "angry young black" applies to so many here at OleMiss. They seem belligerent, suspicious, and always real tense/ not that I can't understand why they're that way, I would no doubt be the same way if I was at a school with 90% blacks - but at least it seems that they would welcome friendship. I guess all the years of persecution - which is still practised to a large extent (don't kill yourself) have brought blacks a built-in defense mechanism. At any rate, what we have at OleMiss is co-existence, not integration. It's funny, but that word seems awfully antiquated.

Re: The Ayn Rand Letter

I really do not like atheists as a rule. They remind me of spoiled children who are actually mad at God because He will not do as they tell Him! I cannot agree with Ayn Rand, herefore, on religious ground, but I do agree with her economic philosophy. And I agree with her when she says that "It is ideas that have brought us to our present state" it is only ideas that can take us out."

Ayn Rand is the authoress of a newsletter, "The Ayn Rand Letter," that is worthy of the attention of scholars. She opts for a "revolution" in the name of reason, egoism and individualism.

The "flier" advertising the "Ayn Rand Letter" asks that you look at the world around you.

"In the name of the 'public interest,' political pressure groups are fighting over who must be sacrificed to whom.

"The mark of today's intellectual is the denial of the intellect. The mark of the educated is four-letter words, inarticulate sounds and the appearance of a savage in dress.

"The government fails in its primary duty: the protection of citizens from attack by physical force at home and abroad. While the citizens are left unprotected against a rising defense are shrinking-- growing sums of money are being poured into subsidized are or the protection of animals in 'ecological' sanctuaries.

"Today's so-called rebels are conformists who have accepted every basic principle of the Establishment: Mysticism---Altruism---Collectivism.

"When an entire generation, the world's youth, brought up on those ideals, has turned to drugs, it is time to question the ideals. Men who have found the right way of life do not seek to obliterate their own consciousness. Drugs are not an escape from social or political problems, but from an unbearable inner state."

Ayn Rand is correct when she asks who is the actual rebel today. Can it be the man who advocates the obliteration of the mind? Could it be the man who advocates the selfless dissolution of the individual? Is it not, perhaps, the man who opts for the supremacy of reason, and "the right of an individual to exist for his own sake?"

The Hubert Humphreys, Senators Kennedy and Harris of this world adhere to an old-fashioned collectivist heresy that has long since been discarded by the thinkers of this poor earth. Students should think twice before falling for the socialist's philosophy. It

Silencing the opposition

By Patricia K. Fawcett

"In the world today, gentlemen, a great thing is dying--it is truth. Without a certain margin of tranquility, truth succumbs."--Jose Ortega y Gasset, Dehumanization of Art (1925).

Fortunately, there has been a degree of tranquility at Ole Miss, enough, at least for some of the young scholars to complete some interesting and valuable studies.

Dr. Landon, for example, has had one book published, and, I understand that he is working on another which deals with troubled Ireland. Dr. Cooke of the History Department has at this moment a paper at the Sorbonne in Paris where it is being argued by French scholars, and he has a book being published in England.

Dr. Swartzbaugh, the author of several articles which have been published in Mankind Quarterly, Edinburgh, Scotland, is being considered for a grant in order to do a study of the divisions in our presentday societies; that is, to search the underlying problems of Catholic vs Protestant in Ireland, Walloons vs Flemish in Belgium, the so-called Separatists in Scotland, Quebec, and even in Jackson, Mississippi, etc.

women and children. "Legal" action will prevent them plus the fact that our men are kept in a state of turmoil trying to fight inflation, taxes, and the rising cost of living.

Our homes are being destroyed by the child-care centers, the new religion, secular humanism, that is being taught in our public school, so-called "sex-education" and the undermining of parental authority which is being taught by our churches.

Read the article on the front page of the October 4, 1971, issue of the Clarion Ledger for a clear picture of the socialization of America through child-care centers. Read the October 4, 1971, issue of The Daily Mississippian on the "liberation" of women. Women of America will be "liberated" communist style. How stupid can we be to fall for the phoney language of the left, where no one gets fired--but they are just not re-hired. Women are liberated from their comfortable homes and forced into factories where they work from dusk to dawn or dawn to dusk and then try to take care of what is left of the once comfortable home. Freedom in the language of the left means that you are free to steal, cheat, take, as long as the taxpayers foot the bill.

As John Stuart Mill said, a true liberal never persecutes a conservative. Are there any true liberals in the United States of America today?

Bother and

Salaams to the chair of the Department of Speech Theatre and to the talented Helen Kellum for choosing to produce Noel Coward's comedy, "Blithe Spirit" brought fun, wit, and charm to an otherwise rather dull November week-end.

It was not really wonderful as tended on the Ole Miss campus. But one can remember that "Blithe Spirit" was written in a time when the British were living through extremely difficult months. And it is a time when beauty, fun, and charm were still cherished. The English speaking world. The cult of the ugly American theatre of propaganda taken over the entertainment world. According to the Mindszenty Report of November, 1971, and the Hollywood Reporter, over 90 percent of American's learning experience comes by way of the motion picture. Movies can distort history, turn fiction into fact, depict types of sexual activity as perversion as typical American or capitalist. They can portray the United States as the world's number one villain, propagandize

(May 1)... Something happened today that confused me at first and then made me sad. The Hare Krishna movement finally made it to Ole Miss (I think it hit the west coast 2 or 3 years ago). Anyway, the two guys who were passing out literature were unusually garbed, their heads were shaved, and ~~XXXXXXXXXXXX~~ the whole bit. I caught myself chuckling at first then for some reason (remember the book Stranger in a Strange Land) I decided that I wasn't being fair—and certainly not kind. The inevitable took place—a crowd gathered and people actually amused themselves at the expense of these two fellows. I'm sure some will say the two enjoyed the attention, martyrdom, etc. But I think the incident reflects a basic injustice that takes place whenever a strange person enters a new environment. I've been guilty of the same type of persecution but it's just so senseless. Why the need to ridicule? Maybe I'm reading too much into the whole thing. Anyway, as long as we're discussing sad subjects—the year is almost over and I really can't believe how fast it's gone by. As unusual as I've told you this place is, I've really come to...

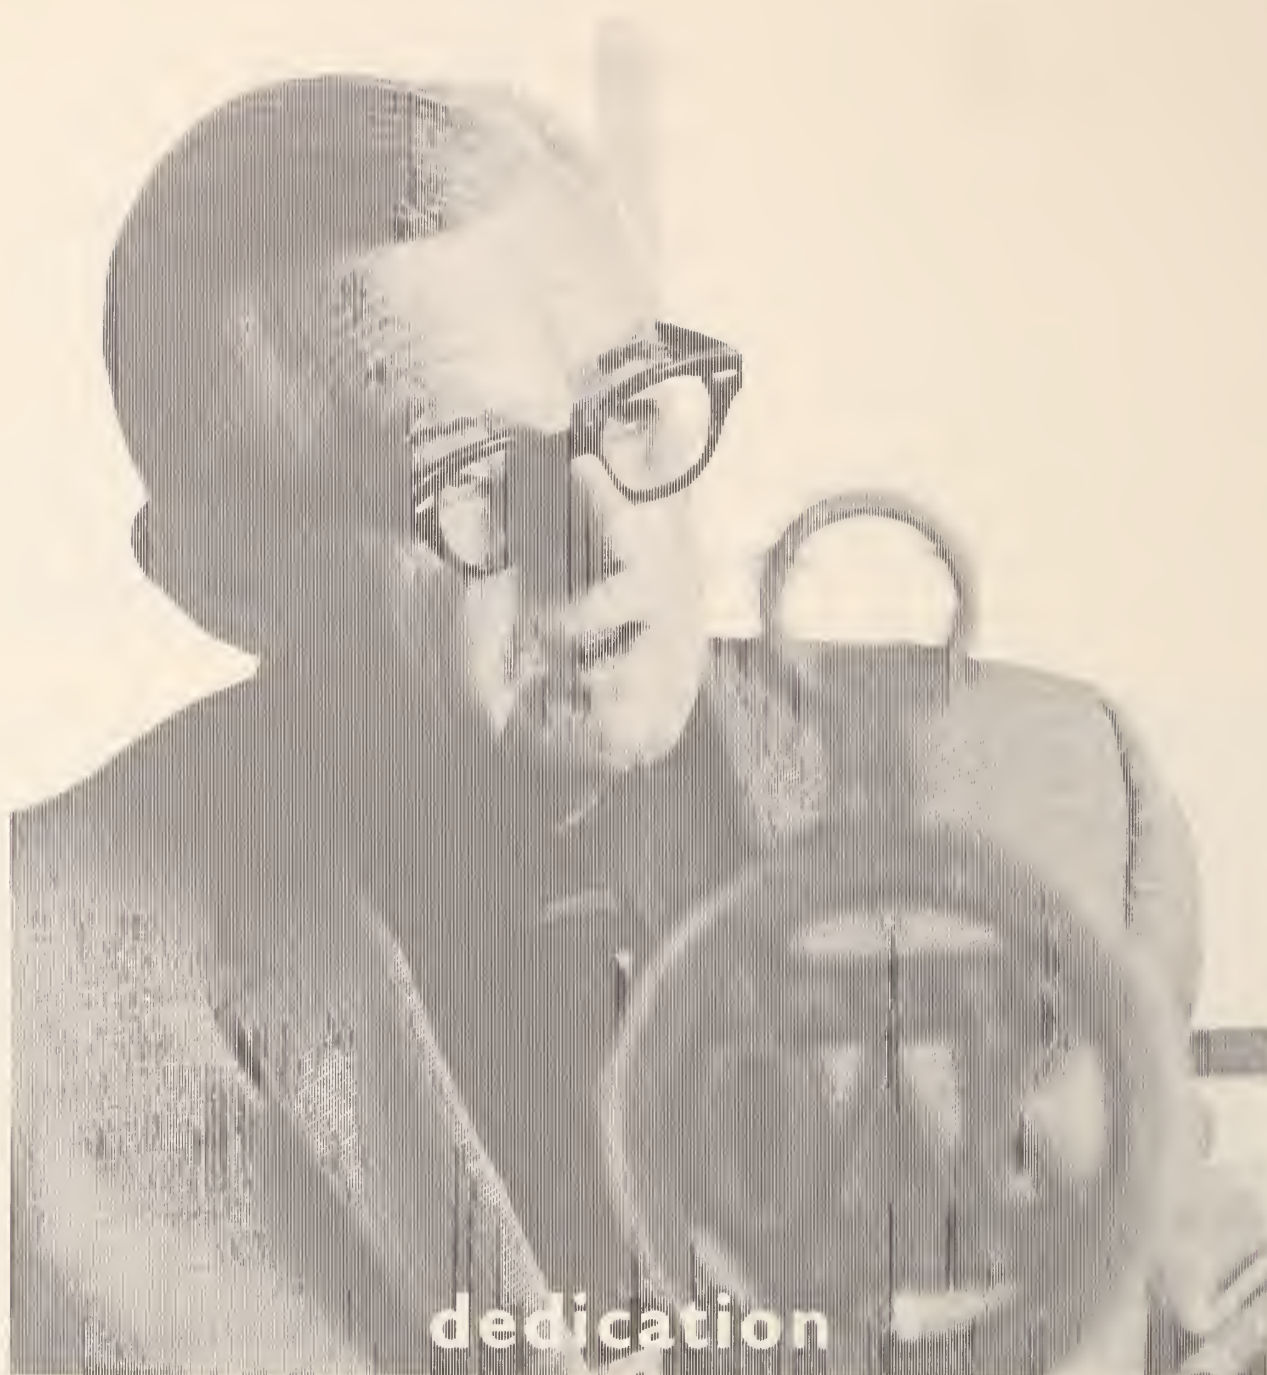

In the 20 years since Tom Hines came to Ole Miss, he has worked intimately with scores of students—solving problems, scheduling activities, discussing matters of policy, and representing the student interest on many committees. As the retired Associate Dean of the Division of Student Personnel and Director of Student Activities, Mr. Hines has devoted 44 years to Mississippi public education. The distinctive manner in which he blended problem—solving with personal inter-action endeared Mr. Hines to students, faculty, and administration. Few people have given themselves as sincerely, as consistently, and as loyally to the betterment of this University, and for these reasons we are dedicating the 1972 Ole Miss to him.

A maximum effort to increase the student rights and student services was the keynote of Associated Student Body President Bill Reed's 1971-72 program.

In directing their efforts toward contemporary students' problems and their position in society, Reed and the cabinet sought to do more than "merely sponsor pep rallies and dances."

New programs included a student legal bar, legal standards handbook and off campus legal representation.

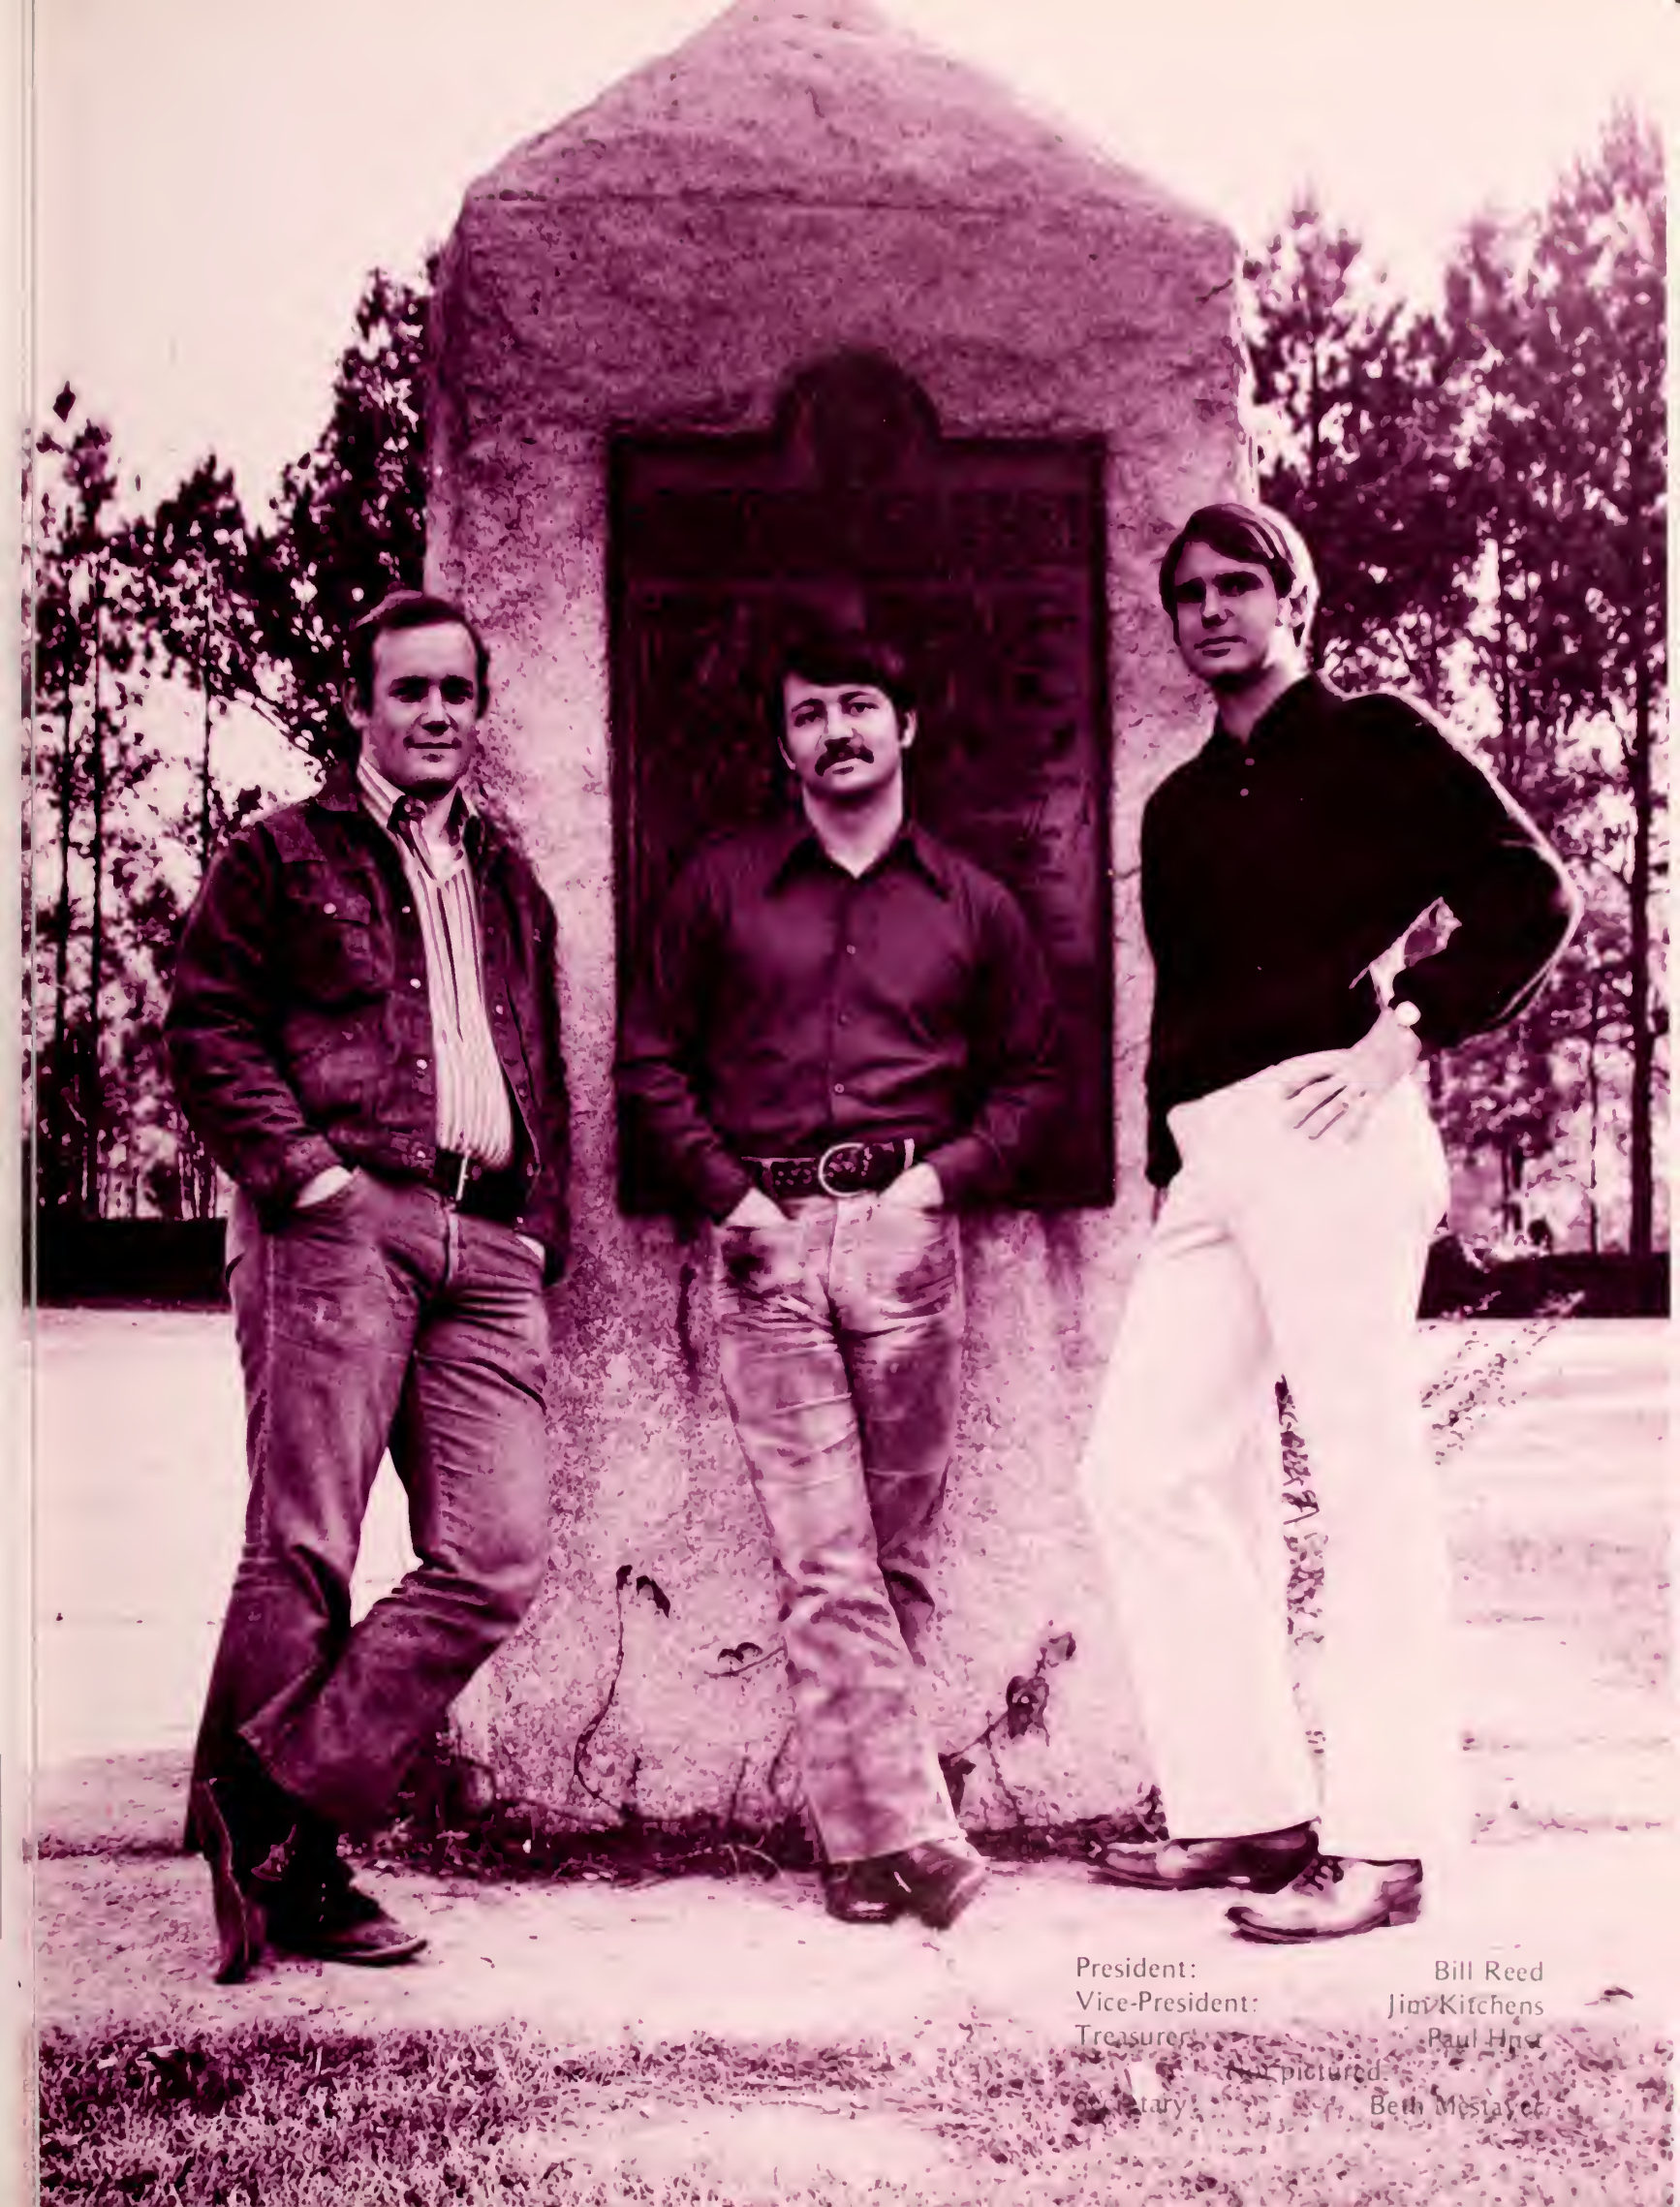

In one area of student services work was done to establish a cooperative bookstore, a free university, and active participation in voter registration and dormitory revitalization.

The A.S.B. film series, a teacher course evaluation, homecoming, the Miss University Pageant, and Dixie Week were other student services provided by the 1971-72 A.S.B.

"This means that it is just possible that a freshman physics student can become a valuable and contributing colleague of his teacher."

Dr. William Hal Furr
Department of Philosophy and Religions

A system which encourages the "omnipotence" of the teacher too often fosters the intellectual "impotence" of the student to the detriment of each. The retort that the teacher is the expert and the student must defer makes a travesty even of those subjects which pride themselves in presenting so-called "hard core facts." It is time that men and women in the humanities remind those in the sciences that the sanctity of objective factuality is essentially interpretation based on presupposition. The best scientists are sophisticated enough to know this.

This means that it is just possible that a freshman physics student can become a valuable and contributing colleague of his teacher. To challenge the likelihood of this assertion misses the point, for this can happen in any discipline with those who are able and who work hard. One of the most serious tragedies of the student-teacher dichotomy is that those called "teachers," often too seldom study, while those called "students," too seldom question. When the student does not work and question, the one called teacher can perpetuate a debilitating hegemony which can hardly be challenged. Both are trapped in a pattern of mediocrity which is deadly for each. The extraneous criterion of compulsory class attendance and the artificiality of grade quantification then easily take over. To the extent that this reward and punishment syndrome grows, the possibility of creativity vanishes.

We hope you enjoy the selections.

school of law

"There are those today who complain that the Bill of Rights provides too great a measure of protection of persons accused of crime—that its proscriptions occasionally operate to immunize the guilty from punishment. These complaints may well be true; but therein lies the genius of the American experiment in criminal justice."

Dr. Parham H. Williams, Jr.
School of Law

The framers of the American republic were well aware of the injustices and the oppressions that are the inevitable fruit of absolutism in government. As colonials, they had suffered the indignities and outrages of military searches and had witnessed the drunken trials of those suspected of anti-royalist activities. Therefore, in drafting their basic governing document they were careful to include a series of safeguards for individual liberty. These safeguards, embodied as the first ten amendments to the Constitution, operate to protect the American citizen from arbitrary, undeserved punishment by his government.

In textual form this Bill of Rights is unpretentious, expressed in less than 500 words, but in substance it incorporates the essential values of the Anglo-American experience. Its terse prohibitions of unreasonable arrests and searches and of compelled self-incrimination—its guarantees of free speech and assembly, of trial by jury and of the right to counsel—and its demand that no man be punished without due process of law, express the ultimate flowering of ideals that first drew breath on the green meadow of Runnymede almost six centuries earlier.

There are those today who complain that the Bill of Rights provides too great a measure of protection to persons accused of crime—that its proscriptions occasionally operate to immunize the guilty from punishment. These complaints may well be true; but therein lies the genius of the American experiment in criminal justice.

The central force of law is the character of the people who devise it and are served by it. Our American character has appropriated massive values from the English experience and from our own 200-year struggle to shape a nation from primal wilderness. These values have been distilled into an essential belief that the individual is indeed possessed of "certain inalienable rights" that are worthy of protection.

Accordingly, we assume as a basic premise that one accused of crime is innocent. From this premise we logically require the government to bear the burden of proving guilt beyond reasonable doubt; and the procedural protections embodied in the Bill of Rights insure that the accused will be treated fairly at every stage of his case. Mr. Justice Frankfurter once observed "The history of liberty has largely been the history of observance of procedural safeguards." To abridge any one of our constitutional protections would be to risk an enlargement of governmental power over the individual and a consequent diminution of personal liberty—a risk no one of us should be willing to take.

"The total number of patients who received a heart transplant is about 170, and close to 90% of those patients died."

Tetsuzo Akutsu, M.D.
Department of Surgery

Heart transplantation boom which prevailed all over the world just a few years ago has now completely ceased. All runners in this field in the United States, except one, have dropped out. The total number of patients who received a heart transplant is about 170, and close to 90% of those patients died. It is rejection that is responsible for such a high mortality rate. However, problems involved are not only unfavorable immunological reaction. Others are procurement of healthy hearts, preservation of hearts, moral, ethical, legal, and religious problems. Then what will be the problems with artificial hearts which are still in the experimental stage? They are materials in relation to durability and nonthrombogenicity, and implantable energy sources. In spite of many unsolved problems, the fact that about ten patients, with heart transplants, some of them still living, had survived for more than two years should be born in mind. The dawn of the artificial heart in clinical application may start with its temporary use on a patient who is waiting for a donor heart. The artificial heart may eventually be superior to heart transplantation when ideal materials become available. However, such a time may not come in the predictable future.

graduate school

"There is an irony about such advanced research. Through it, the chemists have taught us to poison our air and water, the biologists to wipe out whole species, the physicists perhaps to destroy all life."

Dr. Charles E. Noyes
Department of English

The Graduate School is unlike any other school or college at Ole Miss. Each of the others has its own specific areas of knowledge. It has no faculty of its own, yet determines who is qualified to serve as a member of the graduate faculty in each other school. Its responsibility is to coordinate, support, and supervise all graduate programs—in short to maintain and enhance quality graduate education at the University.

Graduate education is unlike undergraduate education. Undergraduate teaching essentially communicates the known. To this communication, graduate education adds the factor of research. The graduate student learns research techniques, learns to teach these techniques, and by his own research in close conjunction with his faculty advisors adds to the store of man's knowledge.

There is an irony about such advanced research. Through it, the chemists have taught us to poison our air and water, the biologists to wipe out whole species, the physicists perhaps to destroy all life. But the one possible defense against such dangers lies in more and better advanced education. We must learn through study in the humanities and social sciences how to reorganize our priorities in terms of intellectual and spiritual, rather than solely material, needs. We must learn through scientific research to repair the damages of the past.

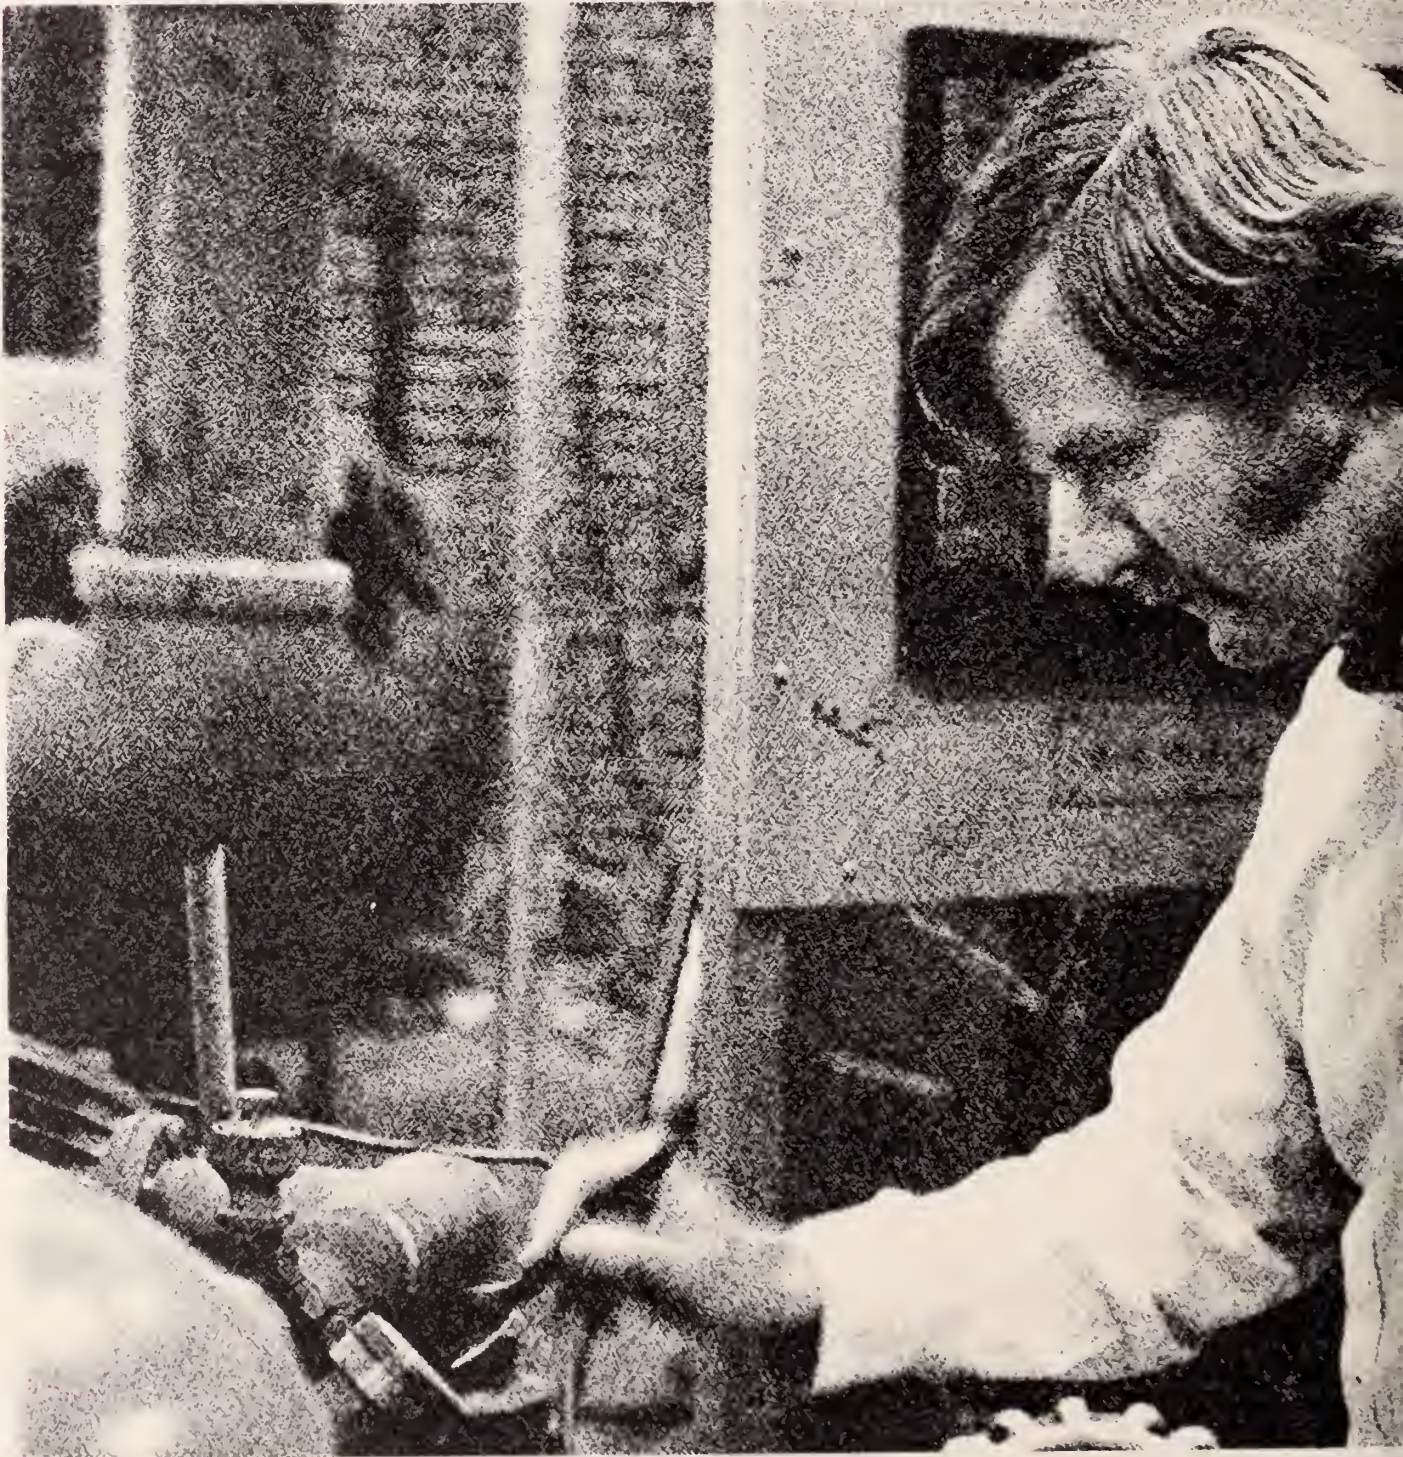

Quality education at the graduate level has always been important. Today it is supremely important.

Centuries ago Francis Bacon stated in his fictional fragment, The New Atlantis, what still remains as the ideal of graduate education. His Master of Solomon's House—whom we might fancifully call the first Graduate Dean—tells the reader, "The end of our foundation is the knowledge of causes, the secret motions of things, and the enlarging of the bounds of human empire, to the effecting of all things possible."

school of engineering

"How utterly strange that man is so circumscribed and limited and yet cannot escape making waves of such far-reaching significance and consequence."

Dr. Frank A. Anderson
Department of Chemical Engineering

The function of the engineer is to create and innovate and to put scientific knowledge to work for the progressive well-being of man. Seldom, however, does the engineer have any control over the manner in which man uses his inventions. It is becoming increasingly evident to both the supporters and detractors of technology that the marvelous inventions and devices of the engineer—which have brought western society and unparalleled standard of living and wealth and prosperity and personal comfort and convenience surpassing the wildest dreams of past generations—are far from unmixed blessings. Man may finally be on the verge of recognizing one of the great paradoxes of existence, that although he is a unique and seemingly isolated island in the universe and so limited in his ability to communicate with and relate to his fellowman, every action of his has an effect on everything and cries out for the right to be free—to make choices—but he fails to recognize that he is powerless to specify the net results of his choices.

How utterly strange that man is such an infinitesimal part of the cosmos and is so circumscribed and limited and yet cannot escape making waves of such far-reaching significance and consequence. As the end of the 20th century approaches we find man facing his greatest challenge. Will he have the wisdom and strength to discipline himself and to control his technological and societal creations? College students at Ole Miss and elsewhere should be girding themselves for battle. Armageddon 1.

"During 1971 Ole Miss pharmacy students kept a woman alive by mouth-to-mouth resuscitation 20,000 feet in the air—and watched a man die in a hospital ward when the limits of our medical knowledge were brought home all too clearly."

Dr. Mickey C. Smith
Department of Pharmacy Administration

The potential social problems and opportunities in pharmaceutical developments of the future are enormous, as they are for the pharmacist. The drug abuse problem has been amply documented, but the use of "legitimate" drugs touches all of us, individually and as a society, throughout our lives. Consider the social benefits, and problems, of the oral contraceptives alone!

But pharmacy students deal in life and death. During 1971 Ole Miss pharmacy students kept a woman alive by mouth-to-mouth resuscitation 20,000 feet in the air—and watched a man die in a hospital ward when the limits of our medical knowledge were brought home all too clearly.

There's no Dr. Gannon or Marcus Welby here, but the contribution to the health of society is just as important. The excitement is more subtle—finding a dosage form which a vomiting baby can tolerate—cutting the costs of supplying needed medicines to the old—getting the real answers on Marihuana, instead of some dormitory hot shot's opinion. The young man (or young lady—the proportion is 1/5 and going up) who leaves here with his pharmacy degree in hand doesn't have to ask questions about relevance—or his own abilities.

school of pharmacy

"Numbering sixteen hundred students, the school is large enough to attract outstanding educators but small enough that contact with the professors is possible outside the classroom as well as within the classroom."

Mr. H.E. Peery
Department of Accountancy

The success of the graduates of the School of Business provides valid evidence of the worth of this division of the university. Numbering sixteen hundred students the school is large enough to attract outstanding educators but small enough that contact with the professors is possible outside the classroom as well as within the classroom.

The business student is counseled to attain his highest possible scholastic potential by competent faculty interested in student welfare. Participation in extracurricular activities such as athletics, military, social, and professional organizations is encouraged because of the importance in developing a well-rounded individual who is able to progress in a competitive society.

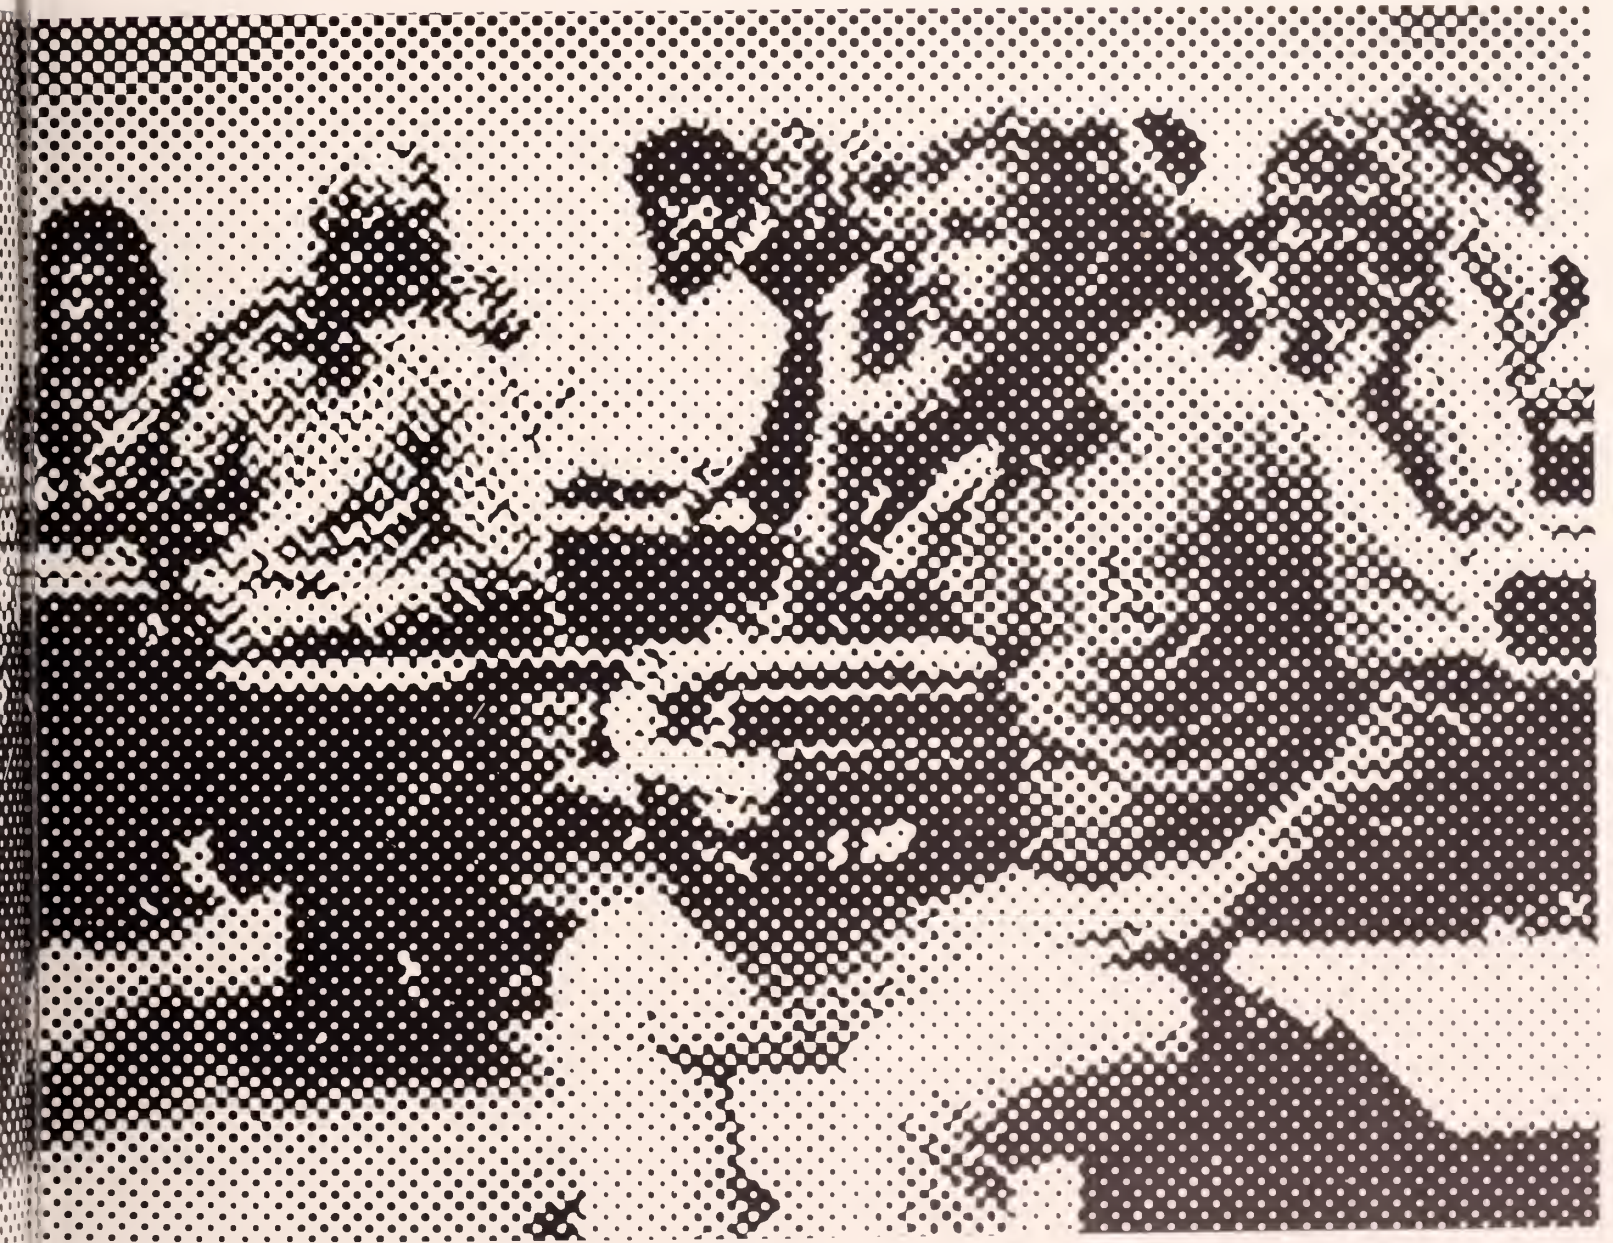

The business school has the advantage of excellent physical facilities including the latest business data processing equipment. In the past five years the budget for the school has more than doubled. The School of Business is characterized by a flexible and effective curricula for both undergraduate and graduate students. Instruction is primary; research is complementary.

The business graduates have been successful in obtaining employment with attractive initial salaries and excellent opportunity for advancement. Many of the graduates have attained positions of leadership in the state and nation.

"Student were asking professors to become sensitive and responsible for helping them cope with the future, to be data banks for awareness of events to come."

Dr. Roscoe A. Boyer

To be asked to write about the future in teacher training is another indication that in 1972, college students were the ones who were prompting professors to focus, not on the past or even the present, but upon the future. Students were asking professors to become sensitive and responsible for helping them cope with the future, to be data banks for awareness of events to come.

Excellent teachers are now being trained for the past because they can be. Current books and pictures enhance the past, readily associating a person with a romanticized, personalized heritage. These media, acting as sirens, focus resources upon the past. It may be that present known means of communication are not appropriate for studying the future. To deal with the past also tends to eliminate confrontation with political issues, with ever present doom prophets, and with the awesome problems of planning.

The task before the School of Education is to train teachers—both men and women—who can assume the moral responsibility for the wishes and hopes of their students and to be able to forewarn and forearm the youth for the future. This is the task definition.

As a unit of the Air Force Reserve Officers Training Corps, the Department of Aerospace Studies focuses on training future Air Force leaders in scholarship, leadership and character.

During the first two years, the academic work consists of subjects which can be described as instruction in air-age citizenship. The final two years places emphasis upon Air Force procedure and applied air tactics.

Leadership drills and class work offers the Air Force cadet training in all aspects of air power and its importance to the security of the nation.

There were many changes in the AFROTC program in 1972. The biggest change was the increase from $50 to $100 per month for scholarship holders and members of the Professional Officers Course (Juniors and Seniors). The number of Air Force Scholarships was increased from 5000 to 6500, with provisions that two-year applicants may now apply.

From MP&L, you get more than electricity

Graduation! It's a happy thought for most students, and a diploma in the hand of a young Mississippian is a symbol of past accomplishments, and the opportunity to advance in the future.

Realizing that a more productive life awaits the college graduate, Mississippi Power & Light Company encourages young people to pursue higher education, and training, whenever possible.

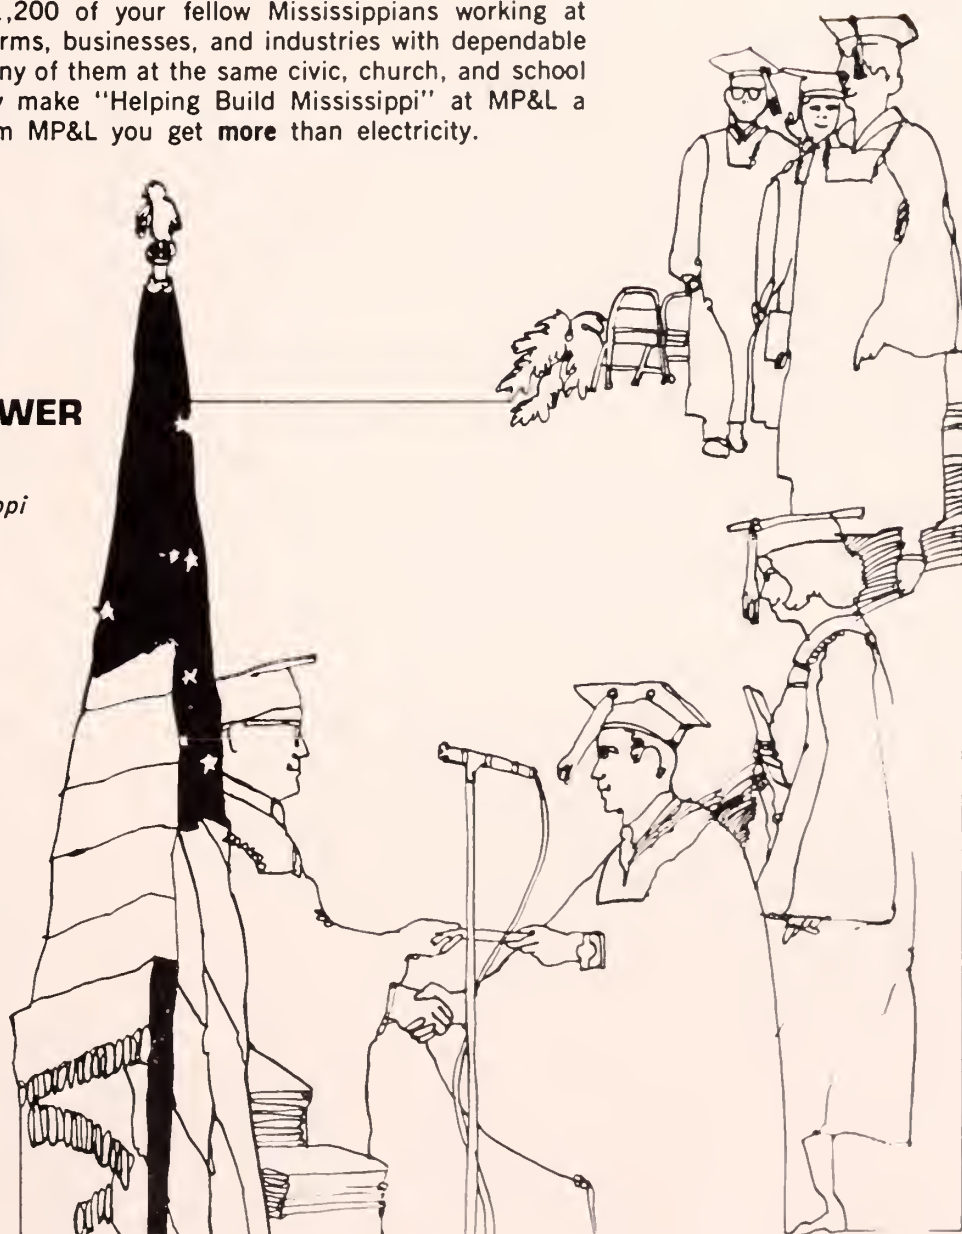

For many years MP&L has participated in numerous programs to encourage Mississippi young people in preparing for further opportunities. Included in these activities are scholarships for college attendance, 4-H Club and Future Farmers of America electric project winners and participation in certain accredited junior college refrigeration and air conditioning courses.

There are more than 1,200 of your fellow Mississippians working at MP&L to supply homes, farms, businesses, and industries with dependable electric power. You see many of them at the same civic, church, and school meetings you attend. They make "Helping Build Mississippi" at MP&L a living reality, because from MP&L you get more than electricity.

Yearbooks may be on the way out. At many schools they have already been discarded. Ole Miss is distinctive in that she rarely feels the obligation or the urgency to conform to contemporary trends. This disposition has been both beneficial and detrimental.

When an annual reflects, accurately and artistically, the people and events of a year, when it offers all students interested in yearbook photo-journalism an opportunity to participate and to learn, and when it serves as a directory to former student activities, it remains a valuable facet of university life. These have been the objectives of the 1972 Ole Miss.

My concern is that the students and those people who will ultimately determine the future of the college yearbook in Mississippi will evaluate and appraise its contribution on the basis of these criteria.

Dan Woodliff
